

What Does Trade Mean for Manufacturers?

More Customers and Sales

Foreign countries purchased $10 trillion in manufactured goods last year. Increasing trade equals more customers and more sales.

More Access

Trade enables manufacturers in the United States to access inputs and technology and participate in global supply chains helping to access even more customers overseas.

More Manufacturing

More customers and sales mean greater demand for manufacturing throughout the United States.