

State COVID-Operation Snapshot for New Jersey

On June 24, the Governors of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut announced that visitors from states with high coronavirus infection rates must self-quarantine for 14 days on arrival. Those states are Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, and Washington.

On May 15, Governor Murphy announced his “The Road Back: Restoring Economic Health Through Public Health” multi-stage plan to reopen New Jersey’s economy. Stage One allows for the relaxed restrictions on low-risk activities that can be easily safeguarded. Phased-in business include non-essential, but easiest to safeguard, work activities at physical locations if they meet safeguarding and modification guidelines, such as non-essential construction with protections. Some non-essential retail may open with significant modifications like curbside pickup. All workers who can work from home continue to work from home even if their industry is reopening.

First imposed on March 21, New Jersey’s stay at home order has added additional requirements for manufacturers, including mandatory face coverings and gloves on the work site, mitigation and sanitization practices, prohibiting visitors and staggered shift and break times.
